

Dr. TOMAS LAPINSKAS

Cardiologist at Department of Cardiology,
Hospital of Lithuanian University of Health Sciences

Dr. Tomas Lapinskas is a cardiologist who specializes in diagnosing and treating patients with ischemic heart disease (coronary artery disease), non-ischemic heart disease and heart failure at the Department of Cardiology, Hospital of Lithuanian University of Health Sciences. He has a special interest in cardiovascular imaging and has appointments in the Department of Radiology. Dr. Lapinskas is a research fellow and member of MRI-Core-Lab at German Heart Institute in Berlin (Germany).

Dr. Lapinskas received his medical degree from Kaunas University of Medicine in 2008. He completed Internal Medicine internship and residency at Lithuanian University of Health Sciences in 2013. He also went on to complete Cardiovascular Imaging Fellowships at the University of Gent (Belgium), University Medical Center Rotterdam (The Netherlands) and German Heart Center Berlin (Germany) in 2010-2012.

He is currently a member of European Society of Cardiology (ECS), European Association of Cardiovascular Imaging (EACVI), Heart Failure Association (HFA) of ECS, Lithuanian Society of Cardiology (LCS). Dr. Lapinskas is currently an EACVI Heart Images of Tomorrow (HIT) committee member for CMR and Heart Failure Specialists of Tomorrow (HoT) at ESC representative for Lithuania.

Dr. Lapinskas is a dedicated educator of medical students, interns, residents, and fellows.